"We are hoping that the approvals come next week, so we can resume trading as early as the first week of July," he said.

Charles, who is also Pertubuhan Pengurusan Pasar Malam Kuala Lumpur secretary, said traders, after months of inactivity, had grown desperate.

Some, he said, had sought help from the association to buy food while others didn't have funds to buy stock if trading were to resume.

He said since 40 per cent of pasar malam traders were aged 60 and above, a majority of the demographic had nowhere to turn to but the government.

The government, he said, should look into expanding its one-off RM500 aid under the economic stimulus package's Cakna Initiative.

"This should be increased to at least RM1,000. And instead of a one-off payment, it should take into account the traders' months of inactivity.

"If the government cares about the welfare of petty traders, it should also look into giving elderly traders and those in the high-risk group a stipend to stay home."

Failure to do this, he said, could see night markets in Kuala Lumpur go extinct.

"Pasar malam are not just for traders but for all Malaysians. They provide a place for the low-income group to trade and buy food. It is part of Kuala Lumpur's cultural heritage and tradition."

Federal Territories Minister Tan Sri Annuar Musa had last week said the Cakna Initiative was a one-off aid, and that traders who were interested in trading from home using gig economy platforms would enjoy benefits under the Penjana economic stimulus package.

He, however, said the ministry was open to a dialogue with traders on the standard operating procedures (SOPs) to find a win-win outcome.

The New Straits Times had reported that 80 per cent of the 190 night markets here would not operate during the Recovery MCO as the SOPs were deemed too restrictive.

Seri Petaling Pasar Malam Association chairman Frankie Cheah concurred that there was an urgent need to get business restarted, even though only 15 per cent of its 1,060 traders would be trading as a result of the regulation on social distancing.

"More than 30 per cent of our traders are aged between 60 and 75 and have been here since the 1980s. We have advised them to stay at home.

"But more than 50 per cent of them are between 45 and 59. These are people with families to feed and older kids to send to school and university. So business needs to go on," said Cheah, adding that the association's traders would adhere to the SOPs.

Taman Tun Dr Ismail Pasar Malam Association chairman Abd Hadi Mustafa described the SOPs as "too restrictive".

He urged the authorities to review the regulation on social distancing as it would see more than half of its 220 traders without lots.

He said traders, facing hardship, were unwilling to give up their lots.

"I hope City Hall can come up with a win-win solution so that we can start trading next month.

"Even restaurants are allowed to operate at full capacity with children allowed to dine in, but our distancing guidelines are too restrictive."

Hadi urged the authorities to place City Hall enforcement officers on site to control the crowd as well as foot the bill for People's Volunteer Corps officers to be stationed at the venues, on top of the venue clean-up costs.

The association's members, he said, could no longer afford these costs as only around 100 traders would be allowed to operate at the venue under the new SOPs.

City Hall yesterday announced that the Seri Petaling night market was awaiting approval to operate.

Those given the go-ahead are Kepong's Lang Emas night market, Taman Bukit Gembira, Taman Melati and Pasar Malam Kampung Sri Batu, which will operate in a community centre there.

Clusters record new cases

DG: Three infected abroad while 13 cases were locally transmitted

By FATIMAH ZAINAL
fatimah@thestar.com.my

PETALING JAYA: Sixteen new Covid-19 cases have been detected, bringing the total number of infections in the country to 8,572 cases.

The death toll remains at 121 or 1.41% out of the overall number of cases.

Health director-general Datuk Dr Noor Hisham Abdullah said three of the new cases were imported cases involving two Malaysians and a permanent resident.

"The three were infected abroad.

"The remaining 13 cases were locally transmitted, involving nine foreigners and four Malaysians," he said.

Dr Noor Hisham said that among the foreigners, two were from the cleaning company cluster in Selangor and six were from Negri Sembilan's Pedas cluster.

He said another foreigner was a detainee at a temporary detention centre in Tawau, who was about to be deported to Indonesia but had tested positive for the virus.

As for the Malaysians, he said, two were in Sarawak from the Kidurong cluster, one was an accused person who had been placed in a lock-up in Melaka and one was a patient who tested positive while undergoing pre-surgery screening in Johor.

Dr Noor Hisham added that 10 patients had recovered yesterday, with a total of 8,156 patients discharged since the outbreak began, putting Malaysia's Covid-19 recovery rate at 95.1% out of the total number of positive cases.

"There are only 295 active cases being treated at the country's health facilities.

"Three patients are being treated at the intensive care units. None of them require ventilator support," he said.

British YouTuber impressed by M'sia's Covid-19 measures

By MARTIN CARVALHO
mart3@thestar.com.my

PETALING JAYA: Well-known British presenter and YouTuber Mark O'Dea has praised Malaysia on how the country has handled the Covid-19 pandemic in a series of videos.

O'Dea, who has been in Malaysia since 2012, documented his experiences of returning to Malaysia recently from England via a Cathay Pacific flight from Hong Kong and his brief stay at a hotel while undergoing mandatory quarantine.

Among the measures he noticed were the social distancing regulations, temperature scanning and health safety procedures upon landing at Kuala Lumpur International Airport on June 10.

"When I arrived in London, we didn't have any of these.

"The authorities didn't check which country we came from and there were no thermal scanners.

"I suppose this is why Malaysia has such few cases because they are really taking good steps when it comes to health and safety," he said.

The 29-year-old said those flying into Malaysia were questioned about their health status and had to undergo a Covid-19 swab test before leaving the airport for mandatory quarantine in a hotel.

O'Dea, who was with the Malaysian-based boy band London Boys, also quipped that he saw "men in suits like in a crime scene" disinfecting the luggage before boarding the bus.

"It's really impressive how Malaysia is taking stringent measures to safeguard health and safety.

"The coolest thing is we even had a police escort," he said in the recording, which garnered some 300,000 views.

O'Dea, who had hosted several local shows here, also expressed how impressed he was with the hotel, which he had to stay there for two weeks.

"The word 'quarantine hotel' sounds like prison or something.

"But it's really not bad at all," he said of the hotel in Kepong.

The YouTuber, who is well-known for his videos on Malaysia, was required to join a WhatsApp group for alert notifications while his temperature was monitored daily during the quarantine period.

To keep himself occupied, O'Dea, who is a fitness enthusiast, set up a small workstation in his room and even did his daily workout using two water-filled 15kg dumbbells.

Although he had to pay RM150 for the hotel room, O'Dea said he did not mind as he enjoyed the meals and was also able to order additional food.

O'Dea, who has 105,000 YouTube subscribers, said he was glad when his swab test came back negative.

CAPP way to protect community against Covid-19

PUTRAJAYA: The Health Ministry has introduced the Prevent and Educate, Practice, Comply and Monitor (CAPP) concept to educate the public to be more responsible and become "frontliners" in protecting themselves, their families and the local community from Covid-19.

Health Minister Datuk Seri Dr Adham Baba said CAPP is a strategy to empower the Covid-19 District Risk Reduction Programme, which is aimed at protecting green zones from Covid-19 and turning yellow zones into green ones in 14 days.

He said implementing CAPP would require the cooperation of various parties with the Health Ministry's "Komuniti Sihat Pembina Negara or KOSPEN" (Healthy Community Country Builder), as well as at the community level, involving village heads, Rela, village development and security committees and neighbourhood patrol schemes.

"They are the ones who will be the frontliners. When combined, they become a large community, which I believe can maintain their green zone status, while those in yellow or red zones could turn them into green zones."

It will also require mobilising existing resident committees as coordinators of preventive activities in the community. The MySejahtera application will also need to be widely used.

Foreign employers and embassies will need to ensure their citizens, especially those in red and yellow zones such as Kuala Lumpur and Selangor, undergo swab tests, he said.

Adham called for the cooperation of all Malaysians to help fight Covid-19 by complying with the prescribed standard operating procedures and observing the new normal, especially social distancing. – Bernama
